Tested on: Windows 7 Windows 10 Tested on: Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 8.1, Windows 10 A new iPhone 8 leak has now appeared online, indicating that the upcoming Apple smartphone will feature a larger 4.7-inch display and a glass back. According to @OnLeaks, the iPhone 8's display is expected to feature a 3:2 aspect ratio, with resolution of 2560x1120 and a 513ppi pixel density. That's roughly on par with the iPhone 7 and iPhone 7 Plus, which both have a 3:2 aspect ratio with resolutions of 2688x1242 and 550ppi, respectively. The new iPhone 8 will also be significantly thinner and lighter than the current model, as its aluminum chassis is expected to be around 6.9mm thick. @OnLeaks predicts the new iPhone 8's weight to be around 157g, while the iPhone 7 Plus is currently around 160g. As for the front of the device, the new iPhone 8 is expected to feature an OLED display with True Tone, 3D Touch and Smart HDR. It will also support dual-lens camera, whereas the iPhone 7 and 7 Plus only have a single-lens setup. The leak claims the smartphone will be powered by Apple's new A10X chip, but the new processor is expected to be made up of two parts — a high-power component and an energy-efficient CPU. According to recent rumors, the new A10X processor will be around twice as fast as the A9X chip. Other notable features of the iPhone 8 include wireless charging, a 3D Touch-equipped new home button, a dual-lens camera and an updated Apple Pay. The iPhone 8 is expected to be unveiled at Apple's special event on September 7, and its release is rumored to be

What's New in the Delete UserProfile?

Delete UserProfile enables the user to remove, delete or delete a user profile. User Profile is often the primary component of an operating system. If a computer becomes infected, corrupt or is no longer in use, a user may wish to delete their User Profile to restore the computer to a clean state. Delete UserProfile can also be used to delete a password, which can be used to destroy an account and all associated files and data. Remove UserProfile is an advanced application. Before launching, you should be aware of some points. It deletes all data in the current profile, including documents and settings. It cannot be used to remove just one user profile. It cannot be used to remove a hidden folder or file. It cannot be used to remove a registry key or a link. It cannot be used to remove a mail profile. In order to really remove the profile, including folders and registry pointers, you can use Delete UserProfile. No need to install, just run the program. Features: Delete a UserProfile file or folder from a Windows computer. Remove a Windows user account. Remove a Windows password. Delete a Windows password file. Delete a UserProfile registry key. Delete a UserProfile registry key or a link. Remove a UserProfile link from a web browser. Supports Internet Explorer, Firefox and Chrome. Compatible with Windows 7, 8, 8.1 and 10. How to use: Click the "Start" button on the bottom left corner of the screen, and select the Program Menu on the drop-down list. Select Run. In the Open field, type or paste the full path of the .exe file. Q: How do I configure a private Eureka server? I'm currently setting up a private Eureka server for an intranet project. I've successfully installed and configured it as a standalone JBoss instance (while ensuring the Eureka server is configured to listen on all interfaces) and now I need to configure it to make it listen for queries from within our network. I am very new to the Eureka project so I'm not sure what the best practices are on how to do this. I'd like to use the built-in client-server communication rather than the REST API. The documentation I found here seems like it would be useful for public instances but I was not able to find any useful information on how to configure it to work within my intranet. This is what I'm currently doing. 1.) My Eureka server is running on a machine named eureka-my-server. I did this by following the docs here. 2.) I have added the port for the web app to the appropriate config file. 3.) I run the server as a standalone instance
